nelson fausto the greek myth of prometheus with its picture of a vulture feasting on its chained victim has traditionally provided a visual image of liver regeneration it is a powerful and frightening representation but if one were to substitute the vulture by a surgeon and prometheus by a patient laying on a properly prepared operating table the outcome of the procedure would not differ significantly from that described by greek poets yet few of us who work in the field have stopped long enough to ask where this myth originated did the poet observe a case of liver regeneration in a human being was it brilliant intuition or perhaps literally just a gut feeling of a poet looking for good rhymes that led to the prediction that livers grow when part of the tissue is removed this book does not attempt to solve these historical issues it does instead cover in detail some of the major modern themes of research on liver regeneration injury and repair as indicated in dr n bucher s chapter the modern phase of experimental studies on liver regeneration started in 1931 with the publication by higgins and anderson of a method to perform a two thirds resection of the liver of a rat the technique described has 3 remarkable features 1 it is highly reproducible resulting in the removal of 68 of the liver 2 it has minimal if any mortality and 3 it consists only of blood vessel ligation and does not involve cutting through or wounding hepatic tissue from the second half of the 1940s when postwar reconstruction began in italy there were three notable driving forces of environmental change the uncontrollable process of urban drift fueled by considerable migratory flows from the countryside and southern regions toward the cities where large scale productive activities were beginning to amass unruly industrial development which was tolerated since it was seen as the necessary tribute to be paid to progress and modernization and mass consumption in his fourth book federico paolini presents a series of essays ranging from the uses of natural resources to environmental problems caused by means of transport to issues concerning environmental politics and the dynamics of the environment movement paolini concludes the book with a forecast about the environmental problems that will emerge in the public debate of the twenty first century the book showing virtuous examples of urban planning in italy and europe exposes certain doubts and open questions what is the new role of urban planning what actions rules are now achievable for the protection planning and management of local scale landscapes the overall reflections gathered in the book contribute to suggest innovative visions about landscape planning at local scale seen as first steps towards a more functional change of perspective new landscapes are the result of local planning practices that no longer seem able to understand the current society through urban design public space and new urban centralities interact with the increasingly complex functions of social life and mark the distance from territorial values relying less and less on physical relationships economic and functional and increasingly on symbolic and intangible relationships as cultural identity landscape is essential for the sustainable future of the urban and rural territory the landscape quality is a factor of economic competitiveness and acts also as a factor of social cohesion and integration
